

MUTINEERS HOLD AUBURN PEN SANTA CLAUS COMES HERE

$1,400 Raised In Drive for Agent's

Half of Required Guarantee Is Won at Mass Meeting

H. M. Stephens, Blevins Banker, Heads Subscription List.

JUDGE IS ATTACKED

N. P. O'Neal Says Agents Hold Key To Federal Farm Aid.

More than $1,400 was raised in one hour yesterday at a mass meeting of Hempstead county business men in Hope city hall, to finance the county agent work in 1930.

A total of $2,700 will be required to carry the county's end of the University Extension program, and yesterday's start is a virtually certain that the entire fund will be raised in the next few days.

Speakers at yesterday's meeting, which was attended by about 200 persons, with a comparatively large attendance from farm communities, pointed out that it was imperative that money be raised because the state and federal governments "match dollar for dollar with local funds. If the county agent work could not procure funds from the county government, owing to the opposition of Judge John L. Wilson, it was up to the business men and other publicly interested citizens to carry on, the audience was told.

G. A. Graves, who presided at the meeting, said that the larger taxpayers should give particular attention to this call because the Quorum Court had reduced the county general tax from five to four mills, making a considerable saving to many taxpayers, who could therefore afford to make a contribution to the county agent work. The Quorum Court came in for high praise from the speakers, for its courageous stand in behalf of the county agents and agricultural education.

The scintillating figure of the entire meeting, however, proved to be H. M. Stephens, well known banker of Blevins. Mr. Stephens, who is famous for his financing of truck crops that have made Blevins one of the great garden spots of Arkansas, was introduced humorously by Mr. Graves as "the man who got us into this by starting a public subscription for the county agent work last year, and will now see if he can get us out."

Haps Judge Wilson
To which Mr. Stephens retorted: "The chairman says I got you into this, but I didn't. It was the voters of Hempstead county that got them into it. I have nothing against Judge Wilson. He is a good acquaintance of mine. We talk to each other on the street. But in this matter he doesn't see things our way—and we are never going to get any where until we elect a county judge who sees things the same way we do."

Regarding the county agent work, Mr. Stephens continued:
"No country ever got anywhere by taking a backward step. To let the county agents go away from Hempstead county now would be a disaster to the true farming interests of this section. The pity of it is that there are some people in this county who would actually like to see us take a backward step."

"It is a challenge to the business spirit of Hempstead county. I headed last year's put for the county agents with a check for $100, and am doing so again this year. I want to hear from the rest of you."

His speech was received with acclamation. The first 12 subscriptions totaled $950, and shortly there were 50 individual gifts aggregating $1,407.

O'Neal Gives New Slant
N. P. O'Neal, Hope manufacturer and financier, who is also a well known practical farmer, gave a new slant to the value of the county agents. He said:
"We have had county agents here in Hempstead county for many years. They haven't done a great deal for us until now, because conditions wouldn't let them do much. But this is an hour when we need them, and need them badly."

Saenger To Give Christmas Benefit

To Offer "Toy Matinee" In Aid of Goodfellows Annual Drive.

Saturday morning, December 21, Saenger theatre will give a benefit performance to aid the Goodfellows Club in its effort to secure toys and Christmas things for the needy and unfortunate of the community.

Manager Jack Eaves, in announcing the performance, says the show will be a morning matinee beginning promptly at ten o'clock, and the price will be one toy, which must be clean and usable. The performance is for the children and the attraction for the showing will be especially adapted for their pleasure.

Each year the Goodfellows have difficulty in securing all the toys needed to bring Christmas cheer into many destitute homes and Manager Eaves hopes that by this matinee offering the club will be able to accomplish more than it has in the past.

set up. Not 60 days ago the board announced that no farmer ought to sell his cotton for less than 16 1-2 cents a pound. You will notice that even since that announcement the price of cotton has kept above 16 1-2 cents a pound.

"But if it weren't for the Farm Board, where would cotton be selling today, with a forecast of 14 to 15 million bales?"

"The Farm Board calls particular attention to the fact that it works through the county agents, helping them to organize the farmer, enable him to command better prices for his commodities. If we don't need that kind of work in Hempstead county today, then we ought to quit trying to farm at all. It is a chance for the farmer to better himself, and now when the federal government has finally agreed to help, it would be folly for Hempstead county to fall down on the local end of the job."

Roy Anderson was secretary of the meeting and there was a very representative group of leading business men in attendance for the City of Hope.

Washington B. & P. Club's Birthday

State Federation President and Secretary Attend Event.

An outstanding event in B. & P. W. Club annals took place in historic Washington Tuesday evening, when the Washington club celebrated its first birthday with a beautiful Christmas party and dinner at the Black hotel, having as their guests the state Federation president, Miss Ruth Alice Wilson of El Dorado; the state corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hazel Carmon Autrey, also of El Dorado; Miss Mary Burgess of Texarkana, chairman of District Six and sponsor of the Hope Club at its organization in November, 1924, Dr. Etta Champlin, state health chairman, and about twenty members and practically all of the officers of the Hope B. & P. W. club, the "mother" club to the Washington organization.

The setting for the affair could not have been more appropriate, the entire hotel having been lavishly decorated with Christmas greenery with the holiday motif being carried out in every detail. The entire Washington club comprised a reception committee who welcomed their guests and thanked them for their assistance in developing an efficient, hard-working group.

Just as the guests were seated at the long dining tables, lovely in their Christmas decorations, with each guest's place marked by Christmas bells, the strains of "Silent Night, Holy Night," were heard and this was followed by the singing of other carols. A delicious course turkey dinner was served.

Miss Mary Catts, president of the Washington club, presided and acted as toastmaster. Following a short business session, she presented Mrs. J. W. Butler, who gave the address of welcome, outlining in a very clever manner the work that had been done during the past year and what was being planned for the future. She said their club was so small, having only fifteen members, that it might be called the "bantam" club, but already they had an ostrich egg before them as an incentive to do greater and better things and were knocking on the doors of Congress with a piece of national legislation.

Miss Margaret Simms, of the parent club, congratulated the child upon its precociousness, admonished it as to future conduct and bespoke nothing but success for its future, with "The Independent Woman" for its textbook. In the course of her remarks, Miss Simms, who is doing outstanding work as emblem weaver, beautifully interpreted the meaning of this symbol of club membership and announced that 84 per cent of the Hope club are emblem weavers, two marks being exceeded only by two clubs of the state federation—Brinkley and El Dorado. She also stressed the fact that it is a real honor to be a member of a B. & P. W. organization, which has for its central ideal the building and development of better business women for a better business world and more than 55,000 are now actively affiliated with the national federation, which is soon to be made international in scope.

Mrs. Hazel Autrey, who has attended several national conventions stressing the value of associations and friendships that grow out of club work and urged all to give their best to the cause. Mrs. Autrey is editor of "The Banner," state federation paper, which has received highest praise from others engaged in this line of work. This is just another honor for "The Wonder State."

Mrs. Catts next introduced the club "grandmother," Miss Mary Burgess of Texarkana, whose long years of devotion have resulted in the betterment of the outlook of many business and professional women. Miss Burgess stated she was enjoying the club (Continued on page six)

HOLIDAY SALE EVENT

Business Houses of City Unite In Inviting Public To Hope.

Santa Claus will be here Friday and Saturday of this week and will spend those two days in the various stores in this city where he will greet his many little friends and many of the older ones. Business men of the city, wanting to show the old gentleman every honor, are decorating their stores and making special store and window displays of holiday season merchandise. They have joined in extending this invitation to Santa Claus and are joined further in extending to the public generally an invitation to visit this city on Friday and Saturday and be convinced that Hope is the logical shopping center of southwest Arkansas.

Santa To Visit Stores
Santa Claus will arrive in Hope Thursday night he will announce in the sunrise radio program from Station KOA at Denver this morning, and Friday and Saturday will be seen at many of the leading business places in the city.

Really, Santa is due for a surprise when he reaches here, for he doesn't realize the magnitude of the stocks of high quality merchandise offered the public by Hope's enterprising business men. Those joining in extending the invitation to Santa to visit here, and at whose stores he may be seen during the two days of his stay are:

George W. Robison & Co.
Scott Stores, Inc.
John S. Gibson Drug Co.
Graham & Gosnell
J. C. Penney Co.
Montgomery Ward & Co.
Patterson's Department Store
Rephain's
Red Ball Store
Right Place Store Co.
Ward Drug Co.
Stewart Jewelry Store
Hope Furniture Co.

Is Major Sales Event
To celebrate old Santa's coming, the firms above named have arranged special sale prices on seasonal merchandise, the idea being to convince you of the desirability of doing your shopping in the stores of this city.

Stocks complete in every department, every line represented and after-Christmas prices quoted for the occasion, these two days offer a rare opportunity for the Christmas shopper to complete the list of purchases planned and complete it at a saving.

Extra Closes of Star
Double the usual press run on both the daily and weekly Star are coming off the press this afternoon, all rural routes and surrounding towns to be liberally supplied. In fact, it is a blanket distribution, with copies placed in every home in towns within the radius of Hope's big trade territory. This is done without any advance in the regular advertising rate and is Star's contribution to the business men's efforts to give not alone Santa Claus but all who visit in Hope these two days a rousing welcome.

Supreme Court Has Snook Appeal Before It

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 11.—(AP)—The state supreme court Tuesday took under advisement the appeal of Dr. James H. Snook, former Ohio State University professor, from a sentence of death in the electric chair for the murder last June 13 of Miss Theora K. Hix.

Arrested In California, Wanted In Arkansas

EL DORADO, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Sheriff John W. Hartman today received word of the arrest at Los Angeles of Lester Hampton, 27, who was indicted by the grand jury here last week on a charge of kidnapping his sister-in-law, Elsie Mae Andrews.

The alleged kidnapping occurred in October, the girl's brother and her sister being alleged to have assisted in the abduction.

No Outbreak Likely In Mountain Crime Mystery Says Law

Feeling Intense But Not the Kind To Flare Into Trouble.

EVERYTHING QUIET

Sheriff Away From County Seat Looking After Other Matters.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Fearing no violence in this mountain section as the result of the return of a youth who says he is the Connie Franklin five men are charged with murdering nine months ago, Sheriff Sam Johnson was out in another part of the county on business today.

His deputy, John Dodson, said the sheriff had taken no steps so far as he knew to prevent a possible outbreak between two fiercest factions near St. James community to which lawyers defending the five men attribute the amazing crime story.

Feeling Intense
There is intense feeling in the county over the crime and subsequent developments, including the return of the man who insists that he is Franklin and who has been identified partly by several persons as the man supposed to have been murdered, but Dodson says it is not the kind of feeling to flare into trouble.

New Sensation
A new sensation developed later this afternoon when Sheriff Johnson jailed a brother of one of the men accused of the murder, and another man. They were arrested, according to the sheriff, on an old pistol-carrying charge, but he refused to say whether or not the arrests had any connection with the Franklin case.

Jim Hester, brother of Hubert Hester, held for the Franklin murder, and Harve Turner, were the men arrested.

Check Up On Franklin
Meantime, the youth claiming to be Franklin denies that he had ever been in the State Hospital for Nervous Diseases but hospital records revealed today that an M. Franklin, of White county, escaped from the institution in February, 1927.

Sheriff Johnson has made public a letter sent him from the hospital which, it is said, was received from Connie Franklin at St. James last January. Signature on the letter is said by persons making the comparison to be identical with the one the man claiming to be Franklin has placed on file here.

Negro Kills Black Wolf Near Hope

First of Kind Seen In This Section In Long Time, Old Settlers Say.

Dug Coleman, negro, living on the Carrigan farm between Hope and Washington, had on display at Whitlow's market in this city yesterday the pelt of a large black wolf he had killed Friday evening of last week, shooting it when it had followed the scent of freshly-killed meat almost to his doorstep.

The animal was an exceedingly large one and older settlers say it has been a long time since one of the same tribe has been known to be in this section. The animal was of the hunter variety, larger and more predatory than the coyote, and one of the breed the government is trying to wipe out.

Coleman had killed hogs Friday afternoon and late in the day had carried the meat to the house. The wolf evidently attracted by the smell of the meat trailed it to the house where Coleman shot and killed it. The negro says he had seen the animal with three or four mates around the neighborhood before and believes the others are still near by.

Desperate Men Holding Prison

Three Children Killed by Bomb

"There's a Christmas package on the kitchen table," Rose, Philip and Mary Falzone, children of a Brooklyn, N. Y. contractor, made a rush for the mysterious, square bundle which had appeared in their home after they had retired the previous night. No sooner had they touched it than the box, a powerful dynamite bomb, exploded, instantly killing the 3-year-old boy, pictured center, and Mary, 15, below. Rose, 8, shown at the top, was fatally injured by metal fragments of the bomb. Police sought three enemies of their prosperous father, Joseph Falzone, who is known to have been the recipient of threatening blackmail letters.

The woman was shot and killed near the Vandervoort home and Vandervoort is accused of having shot her in presence of his wife as result of a quarrel growing out of Vandervoort's efforts to end his relations with Mrs. Ethridge.

Armed With Guns Smuggled In, Men Control Situation

Practically Entire Body of Convicts Participate In Rioting.

GUARD CALLED OUT

Guardsmen and Troopers Form Armed Cordon Around Institution.

AUBURN, N. Y., Dec. 1.—(AP)—Armed with guns said by officials to have been smuggled in to them from the outside, approximately 1500 convicts in Auburn state prison revolted today shooting down principal keeper George Burnford and seizing Warden Jennings and several other keepers and guards and holding them as hostages.

Freedom of twelve ringleaders of the mutiny was demanded for the release of the Warden and keepers.

National Guard Out

The 108th Infantry, New York National Guard, was ordered to Auburn prison by Acting governor Herbert Lehman, the order following out a plan for the hurried mobilization of troops to handle prison outbreak perfected following the riot at the prison last summer. The 108th regiment is comprised of two Auburn companies and units from Geneva and Syracuse.

Warden Barred
Warden Jennings is reported to be barricaded in the south hall of the prison dining quarters, with convicts making desperate attempts to get their hands on him.

Nearly 50 state troopers were rushed from Oneida barracks to the prison on automobiles and motorcycles.

At 11:50 the fire department was summoned to the prison, the prison shops being reported on fire. The firemen were not immediately admitted.

AUBURN, Dec. 11.—(AP)Warden Jennings and law guards, held for half a day as hostages by rioting convicts, were snatched from the mutineers at noon today by a squad of picked state troopers. One convict was reported killed in the attack.

Robbed of the last means of purchasing safe conduct from the prison, the convicts prepared this afternoon for a last desperate stand in the main dining hall, while state troopers and National Guardsmen, armed with tear gas bombs and machine guns, prepared to rush the barricade in the few hours rambling before dark would throw the entire pandemonium and enable the main body of prisoners to escape.

the vehicle gate being closed and locked for some time after their arrival. Smoke was visible above the walls. Finally, when the gates were opened, the firemen were unable to get their apparatus through it, and were forced to place ladders against the walls and climb over, led by state troopers.

Earliest reports were that the convicts had seized the rifles and pistols of guards but had not succeeded in breaking into the arsenal where machine guns, bombs and other weapons are kept.

Man So Nervous Gets So When Spoken To

"It actually irritated me to have anyone talk to me. I was so nervous. Vinol ended this and I feel wonderful now."—Wm. Fahy.

Vinol is a compound of iron, phosphates, cod liver peptone, etc. The very FIRST bottle makes you sleep better and have a BIG appetite. Nervous, easily tired people are surprised how quick the iron, phosphates, etc., give new life and pep. Vinol tastes delicious. John S. Gibson Drug Co.,—Adv.

“Honor Slayer” Acquitted

“This poor little girl never committed a crime in her life,” read the unusual verdict of the jury which acquitted New Jersey’s 16-year-old “honor slayer,” Alice Corbett, above of killing Patrolman George McFall at Jersey City. An outburst of cheering, hand-clapping and stamping of feet greeted the verdict which freed the girl who had frankly confessed killing the patrolman after he had assaulted her.

The People Who Really Love To Play Football
A strange game was played between Harvard and Yale the other day. Harvard won by a score of 13 to 12.

There were thrills aplenty, yet no spectators sat in the stadium row upon row to cheer the deeds of the players. No band paraded across the field during the intermission at the half. It was a game without glory. The game was between the scrubs of the two great universities. They used the Warner system. A sprinkling of Army plays was seen occasionally. There were a couple of Dartmouth tricks and a few Navy formations. Watching the game you could recognize now and then a stunt Bill Roper used at Princeton. One of Staggs' best setups was tried to advantage. The Howard Jones power play was in evidence several times. For these scrubs are smart; don't they have to learn all the enemy formations to try on the varsity before the first team is ready for the big game?

Have to Know Their Stuff
Before the Michigan game, the Harvard scrubs played Michigan football against the varsity until they were blue in the face and black around the eyes. Before the Georgia game, the Yale scrubs had to show the big

A CHRISTMAS CAROL

BY CHARLES DICKENS

The World's Favorite Christmas Story

Begins in Hope Star Tuesday, December 19, with final installment on Friday, January 3. A short continued story, a favorite in every home. Don't miss the first installment in Hope Star on Tuesday, December 19.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

A growth on Rogers Hornsby's heel hampered his playing during 1929. . . . He had it removed through an operation the other day in St. Louis. . . . Undeclared Fordham loses only two regulars at the spring graduations. Kloppenburg and Connella. . . . Added starters in horse races are unlucky if you will accept figures on the recent New York season, where only six out of 64 added starters in stake events won. . . . Coach Hanley of Northwestern said Notre Dame was the best football team he ever had seen. . . . The rumor persists that Humbert Fugazy is due for a good job at Madison Square Garden.

shots of the first team just how Georgia went about the business of making touchdowns. Scrubs have to know their stuff.

If there are any people playing football in the country today just for the love of the game, it is the scrubs. If you think a lineman achieves no glory how about the scrub who is seldom seen in action but who plays just as much hard football day in and day out as the stars of the team? Now and then he breaks into print in a general way under the headline, "Varsity Makes 17 First Downs Against Scrubs in Scrimmage." He is just a man in a football suit out there keeping the real players in condition.

A charleyhorse means something to Albie Booth; the affected muscles and ligaments are described at length, but to a scrub a charleyhorse is just another pain in the leg. He shakes the leg a couple of times, stamps on it and goes on playing.

Hen's He Stops 'Em

The Star goes through the scrub line for a 15-year gain. The sidelines only laugh. The scrub darts in behind the line on the next play and throws the star for a loss. Ho! What's this! Why, there's something wrong with the play! When a mere scrub can snare a play like that, the answer is that the play hasn't been run off right. So the scrub goes back to his place in the line and that's that. He plays football because he loves it. And perhaps dream of a day when the coach will say "Stand over here Ekug, and take left guard on the varsity for a while." The fact that his name is not Ekug but Gusk doesn't mean anything to him. It's all in the game. He simply plays and plays and plays—because—well, maybe you can give a reason?

Dolores' New Lead In Latest Talkie

Dolores Costello, charming Warner Brothers' star, has a new leading man in "Madonna of Avenue A," her latest production now at the Saenger Theatre, the principal male role opposite the fair Dolores is played by Grant Withers who has climbed the ladder of film fame from the lowly status of an "extra" to a much-coveted engagement as leading man for one of the most popular luminaries of the screen world.

"Tonight At Twelve" Is Daring Picture

"Tonight at Twelve," Universal's sensational and daring all-talking screen production of Owen Davis' famous stage play, will show Thursday and Friday at the New Grand theatre.

While being classified as a mystery-farce, it has a different sort of effect. Its punch is in its daring dialogue and its open treatment of a story dealing with husbands and wives who cheat a little too much for safety.

A jealous wife finds a note which she believes is her husband's signal for a rendezvous with another woman. She accuses one of three women—all married and her intimate friends—of being that woman. Interwoven into the turmoil that this causes is the destiny of a young boy and his sweetheart—the son and daughter of two of the involved couples.

The plot is worked out in an unusual manner with the outcome always a problem. Director Pollard went the limit in following the dialogue of Davis' stage play which brought a gasp from even the sophisticated Broadway, but he never overstepped the bounds of common decency.

Flies South Like the Birds

NEA Akron Bureau The Defender, above, the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation's largest nonrigid baby dirigible, is pretty much like the birds as it goes south in winter. It was to attempt to set a non-stop record in an 1100-mile dash from Akron, O., to Miami, Fla. The blimp can carry more than a ton of fuel for the longest flights ever attempted by a nonrigid airship. Jack Boettner, right, is pilot.

"Artificial Sun" Is The Latest Victory Of Science Over Nature

Miss Dorothy Curtis, well-known artists' model of New York, is shown taking a carbon arc sun bath with the recently perfected "artificial sun".

MAN-MADE sunshine, the artificial duplication of all of the rays of natural sunlight, is one of the latest victories of science over nature. Following years of research a device has been perfected which gives off not only the vital ultraviolet rays of summer sunshine but which duplicates the entire sun spectrum—the ultra-violet, the violet, the blue, green, yellow, orange, red, and infra red rays as well. The use of this "artificial sun" by individuals who do not get sufficient sunshine normally is expected to spread to a wider use of it by industrial organizations to increase the health and efficiency of their employees. Already several of the largest corporations in the country have installed carbon arc sunshine lamps for the daily use of their workers. Increased vitality and decreased susceptibility to disease is said to result from this means of supplying the body with an abundance of all of the health-giving rays of natural summer sunshine.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Mrs. Emma Hogarth, who lived in Mrs. Rhodes' boarding house, is strangled to death between 11:45 and 12:15 Saturday night, June 29. Assisting Lieut. Strawn in the investigation is Bonnie Dundee, "rub" detective. Emil Sevier, former boarder, whom Mrs. Hogarth accused of trying to rob her, is sought.

Cora Barker, theatre pianist, thought to have had an affair with Sevier, is arrested as a material witness. Other boarder suspects are: Henry Dowd, Norman Paige, Walter Styles, who had quarreled with Mrs. Hogarth; Bert Magnus, amateur scenario writer, and Daisy Shepherd.

Bonnie learns from papers in Mrs. Hogarth's trunk that the Sally Graves wrote her once a month was her daughter, and that she lived in dread of being found by Dan Griffin, Sally's husband. Recalling the mysterious details of Sally's murder in New York June 2, Dundee concludes Griffin murdered both women and that he is now or has been a boarder in the Rhodes house.

Dundee is excited over his find of an old envelope with Dowd's name on it, which had contained a rail ticket, showing he left New York June 3. Sevier, captured by police, insists he did not murder Mrs. Hogarth and implicates Cora. Dundee goes for Cora, who is to confront Sevier and finds her dead, strangled with her own braids of hair. Sevier is accused of both crimes.

Inquest into the death of the woman is held. Magnus admits the love between him and Cora and her fear that Sevier would return to seek revenge for what she had told police about him. Sevier is brought in.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"I will ask if these are the words you spoke, Mr. Magnus," and the corner selected a sheet of young Brad's notes and read aloud: "My poor darling, if you had only let me watch outside your window, as I wanted to."

"Yes, that is what I said," Magnus spoke from behind his shelling hand. "I had told Cora, as we came upstairs together that if she were really afraid of Sevier, I would stand guard over her. She refused, said there must be no more scandal against her in that house."

"Now, Mr. Magnus, can you tell what awakened you at half-past four this morning?"

"No—I—I really have no idea," Bert stammered. "I dislike the word 'premonition,' but I woke, terrified, sure that something dreadful had happened. It is possible, of course, that I was subconsciously aware of the entry of the police and of the low-spoken conversation of the officers. But I can now recall no definite noise that awakened me. As I have told you I went to sleep about midnight, and did not awaken at all until half-past four."

"That is all, Mr. Magnus—and may I extend to you the sympathy of myself and this jury? . . . Bring in Emil Sevier," Dr. Price directed, turning brusquely to a patrolman standing at a door leading into another room of the morgue.

CHAPTER XII

The creaking of chairs, the gusty sound of sharply drawn breaths, mixed exclamations, marked the entrance of Emil Sevier, suspected slayer of two women. The handcuffs had been removed, but two huge policemen guarded the man who was as yet booked only as a material witness. He had not yet retained a lawyer, and as he slumped wearily into the witness chair his haunted eyes glared about an audience containing not one friendly face.

The hours of grilling—and Dundee now knew that that was not merely a sensational newspaper term—had reduced Emil Sevier, erstwhile violinist for the Little Queen theatre, to a cowering, quivering wreck. Dundee knew he had neither slept nor eaten since that morning. Nearly 15 hours of torture! The young detective felt a sharp twinge of pity, then, remembering the kiss with which Cora Barker's lips had been gagged as her own braids were drawn tight about her throat, his heart hardened and his eyes were as hostile as any that gazed upon Emil Sevier.

Norma Page covered her lovely pale little face with her trembling hands and Dundee envied Walter Styles the privilege of slipping a comforting arm about her shoulders.

"What is your name?" asked Dr. Price briskly.

"Emil Sevier—Emil Sylvester Sevier," the prisoner answered dully, without raising his eyes.

"You were acquainted with Mrs. Emma Hogarth and Miss Cora Barker?"

"Yes."

The examination was on. Dundee, suddenly almost as weary as the prisoner himself, leaned back in his uncomfortable chair and closed his eyes. Question and answer—all noncommittal familiar to him now—followed each other in swift succession, until Dr. Price demanded:

"I will ask you, Sevier, if it is not true that you planned to rob Mrs. Hogarth of the money she was reputed to have hidden in her room?"

Sevier, who had too frankly admitted as much to Dundee early that morning, now stirred and straightened in his chair. He frowned, closed his eyes a moment, then blared them defiantly at the coroner.

"I refuse to answer, on—the grounds that it—it might tend to incriminate or degrade me," he jerked out.

"So Sevier has had time to think, during these 15 hours," Dundee reflected, "and he is not the fool I thought him."

Main, I was going to police headquarters to give myself up for questioning. I saw by the papers that I was wanted," Sevier answered sullenly, subsiding into his chair after his outburst.

"Do you know where the Rhodes House is, in relation to the corner, Eighth and Main?" Dr. Price asked.

"Sure I do, it's four blocks, but I wasn't any nearer to the Rhodes House than that," Sevier retorted, with weak violence.

And a dozen more questions elicited not another atom of information from Emil Sevier.

Finally Dr. Price asked: "Just what was your relationship with the dead woman, Cora Barker?"

"I refuse to answer," Sevier replied sullenly.

"Is it not true that you were once engaged to be married, that you made love to her frequently?"

"I refuse to answer."

"Is it not true that you were so incensed against Cora Barker for having informed the police of your previous plans to rob Mrs. Hogarth that you came back here, at the risk of arrest, to kill her?"

"No, I tell you! No! I never saw Cora Barker last night. I never spoke to her or touched her, and you and your damned third-degree cops can—"

"Order, order please!" Dr. Price rapped sharply on the table with his gavel. "What is the matter there, officer?"

Dundee turned and saw a young girl struggling with the uniformed policeman who guarded the entrance to the room.

"A lady—says she's got something to tell," the officer panted.

"Then bring her forward," Dr. Price commanded sternly.

In the deep hush, a girl followed by a grim-faced man of middle age, ran down the aisle between the two sections of seats. She was very young, and her pretty face was swollen and bloated from crying. Before she reached the coroner's table, Emil Sevier half rose in his seat, cried out something inarticulate, then sank back turning his head sharply away and shielding it with his crooked elbow.

"That is all for the moment, Sevier," Dr. Price snapped. "Take him away, officers—"

"Please let him stay, I want him to know—to hear—" the girl panted, her hands stretched toward the coroner.

"Who are you, young lady?" Dr. Price asked sternly.

The middle-aged man stepped forward before the girl could answer.

"This is my daughter, Miss Myra Cannon. I am George H. Cannon of Mercyville—"

"Please let me talk first, sir!" the girl appealed to the coroner. "Father is so angry with me for coming here; he didn't want me mixed up in it—"

"Just a minute, Miss Cannon. . . . Officers, guard your prisoner. He may remain here until I instruct you to remove him. . . . Now, Miss Cannon—"

A minute or two later, the girl, duly sworn in, was pouring out her story in a flood of words and tears, only occasionally interrupted by a question from Dr. Price.

"I first met Emil—Mr. Sevier—last winter when I was studying music in Hamilton. I thought he was a wonderful violinist. I met him at my teacher's studio, where he sometimes took a lesson. He used to come to see me at my boarding place, and we'd practice together for hours. We—we got engaged to each other—"

"When?"

"In April—April 12, it was. I remember so well—" and the girl's voice broke down completely for a minute. Then, dabbing fiercely at her eyes, she went on: "I told Daddy the very next Sunday, when I went home for the week-end, and he wouldn't let me come back. The next Friday Emil came out to see me—Friday was his day off at the theatre, and he and Daddy quarreled terribly. Daddy made me promise I wouldn't see Emil again, but—but we wrote to each other. I sent him letters to the theatre and Emil sent his letters to me to a girl friend of mine. We were planning all the time to get married and go far away. But Emil didn't have any money, and neither did I, except my allowance from Daddy. And—and I never dreamed Emil would plan such an awful way to get it as that—that woman says he did."

Dundee flinched at the way she designated poor dead Cora.

"You didn't know anything of his plans then?" Dr. Price interrupted.

"Of course not! He told me he was going to come into some money when his father's estate was settled, but I know now. Anyway, last Saturday night, at about half-past 12 or a quarter to one, the phone rang and it was Emil, calling me from Hamilton. It was lucky I answered the phone and that Daddy didn't wake up. I—my mother is dead, and there's nobody but Daddy and me and the cook."

Emil said he was in trouble, but that he hadn't done anything wrong. He asked me to drive to Greenpoint and wait for him there a piece down the road from the station. He said he would drop off the train there when it slowed up. It doesn't stop at Greenpoint, you know, but it slows up to go through the village. So I did, and nobody saw me, and Emil told me just exactly what the trouble was."

Charities Asking for Used Clothes

Citizens Asked To Deliver At Baptist Church Next Week.

The Associated Charities wants used clothing that can be washed from the homes of the city for distribution at Christmas time.

It may be left at the old postoffice building, the First Baptist church, where there will be someone to receive it from 2 to 5 o'clock every afternoon next week.

This announcement was made yesterday afternoon following the first meeting of the executive committee of the Associated Charities. W. P. Agee was elected permanent chairman and the Rev. W. A. Brown agreed to serve temporarily as secretary.

It is hoped that some plan may be devised by which a campaign for public funds may be avoided. The executive committee is appealing for the delivery of donated clothing and hopes that other contributions will make a general campaign for money unnecessary. The committee will do its best to care for all needy cases in the city during the year.

Another need at the present time is a vacant office or store-room where the clothing may be assembled and stored, and which will serve as temporary headquarters for the actual gift work at Christmas. Anyone with such a room available is asked to get in touch with Mrs. Agee or the Rev. Mr. Brown.

of "mother" and "grandmother" to each, that she was not going to be content, but had her eyes on President and hoped the Washington women would see to it that the very soon become a "great-grandmother."

She told of the plans being formulated for the district conference to be held in Hope in February, at which time a national federation of officers will be the guest of honor and principal speaker.

The last speaker of the evening, Miss Ruth Allen Wilson, told of the activities of the club throughout the year, of plans being made for the state convention in Fayetteville in April, of the results of the district conferences and of the plans for the coming year. She also told of the work of the club in the United States and foreign countries who are now actively engaged in it.

and P. W. Club work. "Good things come high," said Miss Wilson, "but unless a thing actually costs us something in time, effort and money we get very little out of it and do not appreciate what we do get. That our national organization meets twice in its officers is evidenced by the fact that at our convention at Michigan Island, Michigan, this year every national officer and chairman and the president of each state federation was in attendance. Our program certainly means much to these women, each of whom is outstanding in her profession or business. If they can give of their time and energy to do one thing well, surely, we, as individual members can do our part just as efficiently in local, district and state work. Attend your meetings, do your work well and results will speak for themselves," continued Miss Wilson, who quoted the federation poem "The Golden Key" written by E. & P. W. women by Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond just prior to the Oakland Convention.

"Our clubs are the golden keys by

Ship and Shore Linked by 'Phone

The first two-way telephone conversation between a shore point and a ship at sea was held the other day when persons in eastern cities talked to officers and passengers aboard the Steamship Leviathan 200 miles out of New York. The historic event is pictured above at H. A. Lafont, left, of the Federal Radio Commission, D. W. Chapman, president of the United States Lines, and William S. Gifford, right, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, talked with Commodore H. A. Cunningham, master of the Leviathan, through the ether. Below is the short wave length telephone equipment in the deck house aboard the Leviathan. Here incoming and outgoing calls are handled at a charge of $7 a minute up to a distance of 1400 miles.

Washington women, Miss Ruth Allen Wilson, served as postmaster at Washington for fifty years and, upon retirement, was ineligible for a pension because no provision had been made for such an appropriation. The Postmaster General has advised that many such extraordinary circumstances have been taken into his attention, so the "clerk" club is starting the movement in which it is assured of the support of the state and national federations to alleviate the condition.

Miss Wilson presented the Charter in Miss Gifford for the Washington Club, welcoming it as a unit of which we are proud and telling them that this club year will witness the advent of at least a dozen new clubs into the state federation. Truly "Better business women for a better business world" is a worthy project and the movement is growing by leaps and bounds. In 1910, when the federation was founded, 22 women met in the city of St. Louis and were the nucleus today more than 3500 are affiliated with them.

The work of the health committee was also touched upon and the movement for club women to maintain not a degree of good health that they may be "on the job every day" is a worthwhile goal, not only for business women, but for her employer and fellow employees.

Miss Wilson advised with the Washington club concerning their plan to petition legislation whereby a law pertaining retired third-class postmaster may be enacted. This movement is a result of the fact that a

Alabama Blocks Tax Cut Action

Because of Objection, Tax Reduction Program Is Unsettled.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(P)—Immediate consideration of the $100,000,000 tax reduction resolution in the senate was blocked today by Senator Black, Democrat, Alabama, when Chairman Street of the finance committee asked that it be taken up ahead of the tariff measure and voted upon by tomorrow at 4 p. m.

Street was prepared to act on an offer from leaders of the Democratic-Republican Independent coalition in charge of the tariff measure to give the tax resolution right of way under an agreement providing for a limitation of debate.

But at he proposed the agreement Black objected. The Alabamian gave no explanation and a program for disposition of the tax resolution was temporarily unsettled.

The Other Side of Christmas

In presenting the Christmas announcements of Hope's merchants, in today's edition, The Star is telling a merchandising story that is familiar all over the world.

We are on the eve of the year's greatest holiday—a season of gifts among the people of every Christmas nation. It is an important event for the tradesmen, too. Sometimes we are accused of commercializing Christmas entirely. That isn't true. The world still remembers the occasion of Christmas. These are busy days, in the homes as well as the stores; but on Christmas Eve there will come a quiet moment when Christian people everywhere pause to give thanks to Him.

Test we forget the true occasion, in the rush of holiday shopping, give one moment to our picture of the other side of Christmas. This is the season to make people happy. Christ would approve, for the world has always been oppressed with suffering and sadness. This is the season, not of reward, but of compassion and forgiveness. Christ would approve that, too, for the world is full of failures and injustice. And finally, this is the season of hope. Christ would emphasize that—for as long as men live there will be cases of improvidence and despair.

Christmas is a beautiful lesson. Its very position in the calendar always seemed to us to give added significance to its meaning as a religious event. It is just before New Year's. The fortunate distribute gifts to the less fortunate, in token of thanksgiving for being able to start a new year auspiciously. To the less fortunate, heartened by the same occasion, the new year may bring new opportunity and the courage to turn it to account.

Our fine modern civilization is not the complete brotherhood of man that Christ sought, and his disciples still preach today. Christmas reveals some stark pictures of poverty and neglect. It is the great tragedy of this rich and powerful age that it has been unable as yet to wipe poverty and uncared-for sickness from the face of the earth.

But industrial civilization is young. Steam-power, the cotton gin and the reaper-binder are all scarcely one hundred years old. It is a mere scratch on the face of Time. Christianity, and the tools of modern industry, have already accomplished something. They have freed the world of tyranny. Physical cruelty practiced upon the people by their rulers, is unheard of today. And more people have more comforts, more individual wealth—especially here in America—than in any previous age.

Give us a few more generations, and perhaps we shall abolish poverty entirely.

Fighting the White Plague

If you haven't yet taken occasion to invest in some of the Christmas seals put out by the National Tuberculosis Association, now would be a good time to do so. The fight against tuberculosis is winning, but a great deal of work still remains to be done, and it costs money to do it. Buying these seals will help fill the war chest for the coming year.

Very real gains have been made, and it is encouraging to review them.

An article in the current issue of Good Housekeeping magazine points out that whereas, 25 years ago, tuberculosis was claiming 200 lives in each 100,000 annually, the toll today is less than half of that figure. At the beginning of the century the situation was regarded as almost hopeless; now the leaders in the anti-tuberculosis campaign are looking forward confidently to the day when the scourge will be eliminated entirely.

Part of the fight against the disease, of course, consists in preventive measures; but a great deal of it lies in curing the sufferers who have already contracted it—a task that was considered impossible a few years ago.

"The road back to health is a long one, long and uncertain unless the patient has rest and an untroubled mind and good food," says the magazine. "These must frequently—if not usually—be provided for through sources outside the patient's family. Hence the necessity for larger sums of money. There are over 800,000 tuberculosis cases in the country today. Hence the need for an ever-increasing army of seal purchasers."

This campaign is as worthy a one as you are likely to encounter in the course of a year. If you haven't bought any seals yet, today would be a good day to begin. You will be contributing directly to a very fine and important movement.

Help Build a Rainbow!

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

News of Other Days

From the Files of the Star

WASHINGTON—Crime continues to be far more prevalent in the city than in the country. Although more crimes may go unpunished in urban communities, 78 per cent of prisoners in state and federal penitentiaries are there for offenses committed in towns of more than 2500 inhabitants, despite the fact that residents of smaller communities represent about half the population.

In a study called "The Prisoner's Antecedents," based on data for 19,000 prisoners committed in the first six months of 1923, the Census Bureau also finds that the relative virtue of the rural women is even greater than that of the rural man. The urban ration for imprisoned females is seven times as large as the rural ratio; the ratio for the males only three times as large.

In only one group of offenses, it was found, did the ratio for commitments of rural citizens exceed that for city dwellers—liquor law violations. The rural ratio was 2.3 as compared with the urban 2.2, though it is suggested that rural bootleggers are more readily caught and convicted than urban violators.

Practically 90 per cent of the prisoners studied were able to read and write. But more than two-thirds had received only an elementary school education, only 14.4 a high school training and but 3.4 per cent the advantages of college or university. The Census Bureau notes "a decidedly lower educational status for the prisoners than for the population as a whole."

The ratio of commitments per 100,000 of adult population was 43 per cent for the illiterate as against 27 per cent for those able to read and write. Relatively high percentages of illiterates are reported among men convicted of assault, homicide, liquor law violations and rape. But only 1 per cent of the embezzlers were illiterate and less than 3 per cent of those convicted of fraud and forgery.

Of the men sentenced 54 per cent were single, 40 per cent married, 3.2 per cent widowed and 2.8 per cent divorced. Among women prisoners with noticeable differences, percentages were: Single 34, married 53, widowed 7, divorced 6.

But the divorced population furnished a disproportionately large number of prisoners, possibly because divorce is apt to follow crime and conviction. The ratio for divorced males was three times that for single males and six times the ratios for married men and widowers. Divorced women in proportion to their numbers went to prison six times as often as single women and eight times as often as married women.

Married men living with their children seem least apt to go to prison. Of male prisoners only 6.3 per cent had previously been living with their children, out of 40 per cent reported married.

Less than 20 per cent of the men convicted had previously earned $40 or more a week. And about 27 per cent of the women sentenced had been earning less than $10 a week and 53 per cent less than $20 a week.

About 39 per cent of the women and 2 per cent of the men were unemployed when their crimes were committed, but the compilers of the survey did not determine in how many cases the unemployment was voluntary. The highest percentage of unemployment among those convicted for any one offense was found at 46 per cent among the burglary group.

Only 20 per cent of the men convicted were ex-service men.

Mayhew Family To Face Grand Jury

In Playful Mood Attempt To Shoot Sheriff and Aides.

TEXARKANA, Dec. 10.—Alleged idiosyncrasies of the Mayhew family, and particularly those of its daughters, will be the subject of grand-jury investigation at Boston this week, County Attorney L. C. Boswell said Monday.

Mrs. Mayhew, her younger daughter, and her sister, were at a party which officers broke up at the Mayhew home, 1802 Nollman street, Sunday night, were in jail and the older daughter, Stella, was at large, when Monday's chapter of the family history was closed.

Sheriff G. H. Brooks and Deputy Sheriff John McCall, investigating complaint of shots and loud talking at the house, said they were met at the door by Stella, and that she not only pointed a pistol at him but snapped it at him.

Sheriff Brooks did not learn whether the gun was loaded as he kept walking toward the girl and she ran. His attention was engaged by another escaping member of the party, whose purpose was frustrated.

Officers recalled that Wilda, the younger girl, made the 1929 feminine gesture of undaunted youth last summer by systematically chopping to pieces a new automobile parked in front of their home by a youth who refused to make his departure and went to sleep on the porch.

An Iowa woman had three husbands within 10 months. She must be getting ready to move to Hollywood.

A banker says the Senate's failure to pass a tariff bill contributed to the recent collapse of the stock market. Well, that's at least one reason why Al Smith can take his defeat of 1928 philosophically.

Firemen had to wade knee deep in beer in a cellar in Malden, Mass., to put out a blaze. The felons!

If President Hoover can get by with developing more waterways and then getting the railroad people to spend lots of money on facilities to handle more freight, he must be an Economist, and the capital "E" is intended.

Jersey City's chief of police advises members of the force to "give your wrist watches back to your sisters." And, oh, say, how about giving them the cigar lighters, too?

A sand shark, with two mouths, was caught off Sea Bright, N. J. (the other day). Probably the radio will work all right now.

Slashes Restaurant Waiter Because No Peas In "Pea" Soup

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Peter Tarkowski, man of parts, seated himself on a stool in the restaurant of Edward Driegel and called for pea soup. The dish was placed before him and he deftly ran his spoon through the green contents.

"Where's the peas?" he demanded. "Well," said Driegel, "they're kinda cooked up in there."

"Yes, I guess so!" was the indignant retort. "By gum, I want peas in my soup!"

"But that's what we refer to as split pea soup and it kinda cooks up all the peas," said the proprietor.

The argument progressed to the point where Tarkowski, still convinced that pea soup should contain visible peas, jerked out a knife and slashed the restaurant man across the forehead. He is held in jail on $1000 bail on a charge of felonious assault.
